Painted kitchen cabinets are a great investment for anyone remodelling their room. You may love the color or finish you have chosen right now, but what about next year or the year after? Easy: painting existing cabinets is a great way of changing the aesthetic of your kitchen without the upheaval of a full room refit – plus it will take less time, skip the disruption of renovation, and save money.

Of course, if your existing kitchen layout isn't meeting your needs, you might be looking for inspiration for a whole new room with painted kitchen cupboards taking center stage.

But whether it's a room refresh or a complete renovation, keep reading for our favorite painted kitchen cabinet ideas, including the moody and the muted, the bold and the subtle, and the classic and the on trend.

8. CONSIDER FINISH ALONG WITH COLOR

It's not just the shade of the paint you pick for kitchen cabinets that's crucial to the finished effect but also the finish – whether that's gloss, matte, or something in between.

'The kitchen island is Anchors Aweigh SW 9179 and the kitchen perimeter is Marshmallow Cream from Starmark Cabinetry,' explains Stephanie Lindsey of Austin Texas-based Etch Design Group. 'We tend to stay with semi-gloss for traditional and transitional cabinetry; this sheen provides just enough cleanability without being glossy and overpowering.'
